

CHILD SUPPORT 101

by Texas Attorney General Greg Abbott

THE CHILD SUPPORT DIVISION OF THE OFFICE of the Attorney General (OAG) assists parents in obtaining the financial support necessary for children to grow up and succeed in life. To help make this happen, the OAG works with families throughout Texas so they can benefit from child support services.

To encourage parental responsibility, the OAG establishes paternity of children, establishes court orders for financial and medical support, and enforces support orders. The OAG also promotes the involvement of both parents in the life of the child by working with community groups, schools and hospitals.

The OAG wants to make sure all Texans know that the Child Support Division can help them obtain financial and medical support for their children.

What does the child support program do?

The Child Support Division provides the following services, depending upon the circumstances:

- locating absent parents
- establishing paternity
- establishing, enforcing and modifying child and medical support orders
- collecting and distributing child support payments.

Who can apply for child support services?

To help parents collect child support, the Child Support Division accepts applications from mothers, fathers and other individuals who request services.

Where do people apply for child support services with the Office of the Attorney General?

Applications can be obtained by visiting Child Support Interactive on the main Attorney General website at www.texasattorneygeneral.gov, or by calling the 24-hour voice response system at (800) 252-8014. Applications can also be completed online using Child Support Interactive.

Parents who receive financial assistance through the Texas Health and Human Services Commission automatically receive child support services.

What information does the Office of the Attorney General need to locate a noncustodial parent?

The most important information an applicant can provide, aside from the noncustodial parent's current address, is the name and address of the other parent's current employer. If the current employer is not known, the name and address of the last known employer should be provided.

Additionally, the following information about the other parent should be provided:

- Social security number and date of birth
- Names and addresses of relatives and friends
- Names of banks or creditors, such as utility companies
- Names of organizations, unions or clubs to which the other parent belongs
- Places where the other parent spends free time.

How can child support be changed?

Only the court can modify the child support order. It cannot be done by agreement of the parties. Grounds for a modification include a material and substantial change in the circumstances of a child or a person affected by the order, or the passage of three years since the last child support order and a difference in monthly payment by either 20 percent or $100 from the child support guidelines. A parent subject to a child support order may request a review of the ordered child support amounts every three years by contacting the Office of the Attorney General.

Can a parent take custody of the child instead of making child support payments?

Both parents must provide for the child, no matter which parent has primary custody. Child support is normally paid to the custodial parent for the benefit of the child. Legal custody can be changed, but only if the parents go to court to modify the previous child support order and establish a child support amount for the new noncustodial parent.

Does the Office of the Attorney General handle custody and visitation disputes?

Although federal regulations do not allow the Office of the Attorney General to use child support funding for custody and visitation related matters, the office helps parents who are engaged in custody or visitation disputes by partnering with local organizations to provide access and visitation services, including co-parenting education, alternative dispute resolution, development of parenting plans, supervised visitation and visitation enforcement. For more information about access and visitation programs throughout Texas, visit the child support section of the Attorney General's website and select Access and Visitation Help.
