The Actors Place opens in Austin

The Actors Place now open in Austin.

The Actors Place now open in Austin.

AP July 9, 2005- The Actors Place has moved to Austin and is now open. The surge of over one billion dollars in films in the past four years in Austin has truly earned our Capital city the title of the THIRD COAST. "So it was the right choice to move completely from Dallas to Austin", Says CEO & Founder Will Boroski. Offices are being readied this month and our workshops are now in the million dollars Jean Cochran center in Round Rock, 10 Miles north of Austin. "I am originally from the Austin area" said Will Boroski, "So it was an easy decision for me"!

Will Boroski moved his family to Round Rock where he has opened a Music Publishing Company in Nashville and in Austin with Nashville producer/writer Ruthie Steele. The company specializes in music for Film & Television. "so it is not a far departure for me" said Boroski. The Actors Place will be run by CEO Boroski, and (except for workshops) will do almost all of it's correspondence and services via the Internet and email.

2005-6 is already looking better for Austin than the past four years, with a rush of projects coming to Austin this fall and early 2006. The Austin Film Commission has done an amazing job promoting the city to LA productions and many have visited the city already.

The Actors Place in Dallas has closed its doors completely and opened in Austin this July 2005. Keeping information and auditions notices (to and for) the Actors (of and about) the exciting productions in Austin will be the primary focus for area actors and those not in Austin (i.e. Houston, Dallas).

Will Boroski (a Native of the Austin area) and The Actors Place has relocated to Austin now and his popular workshops are being offered this month (July).

The Actors Place is updating its web site and will follow a similar format to the info listed below. All workshops and classes are listed on the calendar page at www.Willboroski.com.
