Mr. William P. Chesser
City Attorney
City of Brownwood
P.O. Box 1389

OR2009-05250

Dear Mr. Chesser:

You ask whether certain information is subject to required public disclosure under the Public Information Act (the "Act"), chapter 552 of the Government Code. Your request was assigned ID# 340589.

The Brownwood Police Department (the "department") received a request for all information pertaining to a named individual. You claim that the requested information is excepted from disclosure under section 552.101 of the Government Code. We have considered the exception you claim and reviewed the submitted information.

Section 552.101 of the Government Code excepts from disclosure "information that is considered to be confidential by law, either constitutional, statutory, or by judicial decision." Gov't Code § 552.101. This section encompasses the common-law right of privacy. Common-law privacy protects information that (1) contains highly intimate or embarrassing facts, the publication of which would be highly objectionable to a reasonable person and (2) is not of legitimate concern to the public. Indus. Found. v. Tex. Indus. Accident Bd., 540 S.W.2d 668, 685 (Tex. 1976). To demonstrate the applicability of common-law privacy, both prongs of this test must be satisfied. Id. at 681-82. This office has found that a compilation of an individual's criminal history is highly embarrassing information, the publication of which would be highly objectionable to a reasonable person. Cf. U.S. Dep't of Justice v. Reporters Comm. For Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749, 764 (1989) (when considering prong regarding individual's privacy interest, court recognized distinction between public records found in courthouse files and local police stations and compiled summary of information and noted that individual has significant privacy interest in compilation of one's criminal history). Furthermore, we find that a compilation of a private citizen's criminal history is generally not of legitimate concern to the public. However, information relating to routine traffic violations is not excepted from release under common-law privacy. Cf. Gov't Code § 411.082(2)(B) (criminal history record information does not include driving record information).

In this instance, the request is for any and all information held by the department pertaining to a named individual. Thus, this request requires the department to compile the named individual's criminal history. Therefore, to the extent the department maintains law enforcement records depicting the named individual as a suspect, arrestee, or criminal defendant, the department must withhold such information under section 552.101 in conjunction with common-law privacy. We note you have submitted information related to routine traffic violations. Records of routine traffic offenses are not protected by common-law privacy. Id. We also note you have submitted information that does not list the named individual as a suspect, arrestee, or criminal defendant. This information does not implicate the privacy interests of the named individual. Thus, we will address whether any of this information is excepted from disclosure.

Next, you contend that some of the remaining information may be confidential under the doctrines of constitutional and common-law privacy. Section 552.101 also encompasses constitutional privacy. Constitutional privacy consists of two interrelated types of privacy: (1) the right to make certain kinds of decisions independently; and (2) an individual's interest in avoiding disclosure of personal matters. Open Records Decision No. 455 at 4 (1987). The first type protects an individual's autonomy within "zones of privacy," which include matters related to marriage, procreation, contraception, family relationships, and child rearing and education. Id. The second type of constitutional privacy requires a balancing between the individual's privacy interests and the public's need to know information of public concern. Id. The scope of information protected under constitutional privacy is narrower than that under the common-law doctrine of privacy; the information must concern the "most intimate aspects of human affairs." Id. at 5 (citing Ramie v. City of Hedwig Village, 765 F.2d 490 (5th Cir. 1985)). The two-prong test for common-law privacy is as we discussed above. See Indus. Found., 540 S.W.2d at 685.

Upon review of the remaining information, we conclude that none of the information comes within one of the constitutional zones of privacy or involves the most intimate aspects of human affairs. Therefore, the remaining information may not be withheld under section 552.101 on the basis of constitutional privacy. We note that the information at issue contains criminal history compilations of individuals who are not the individual named in the request. Upon review, we find the criminal history information we have marked is intimate and embarrassing and not of legitimate concern to the public. Therefore, the department must withhold the marked criminal history information under section 552.101 in conjunction with common-law privacy. However, the remaining information is not intimate or embarrassing or is of legitimate public interest. Thus, the remaining information is not confidential under common-law privacy, and the department may not withhold it under section 552.101 of the Government Code on that ground.

We note that the remaining information contains information that is excepted from disclosure under section 552.130 of the Government Code.¹ Section 552.130 excepts from public disclosure information that relates to:

- (1) a motor vehicle operator's or driver's license or permit issued by an agency of this state; [or]
- (2) a motor vehicle title or registration issued by an agency of this state[.]

Id. § 552.130(a). We have marked the Texas motor vehicle record information that the department must withhold under section 552.130.

In summary, to the extent the department maintains law enforcement records depicting the named individual as a suspect, arrestee, or criminal defendant, the department must withhold such information under section 552.101 of the Government Code in conjunction with common-law privacy. The department must withhold the criminal history information we have marked under section 552.101 of the Government Code in conjunction with common-law privacy. The department must also withhold the information we have marked under section 552.130 of the Government Code. The remaining information must be released.²
